Muchenje Safari Lodge Chobe Announces North American Launch

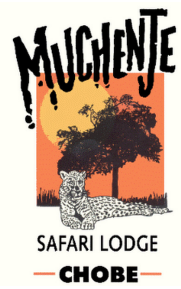

Denver, CO (July 08, 2010) – Today, Muchenje Safari Lodge announced their launch into the North American market. Now with special focus on North American travelers, Muchenje Safari Lodge is situated on the remote, Western side of Botswana’s Chobe National Park and is the only lodge in this area, offering a very private game viewing experience, including excellent opportunities to view the massive herds of elephant for which Chobe is well known.

“Nothing is too much trouble at Muchenje,” explains Matt Smith, who runs the lodge alongside his wife, Lorna. “We can only accommodate up to 22 guests at any one time, so we take great pride in getting to know our guests and making sure that their every desire is accounted for. As the most intimate lodge in Chobe, we pride ourselves on offering a private and personal safari experience.”

This owner-run lodge in Chobe National Park incorporates dining area, bar, viewing deck with natural swimming pool as well as fireside deck and lower dining deck with amazing views. Each of the privately-spaced, 11 rooms affords unique, panoramic views of the flood plain. Game Viewing options include early morning, late morning, afternoon and full day game drives, game viewing on the river, walking safaris, night drives and culture at nearby traditional village. Located only two hours by road from Victoria Falls, Chobe National Park and Muchenje Safari Lodge are a perfect addition to many southern African safaris.

Travel agents and tour operators interested in learning more about Muchenje as well as Botswana’s Chobe National Park can contact the lodge’s North American representatives, The Fazendin Portfolio, through www.fazendinportfolio.com. Here the travel trade can learn more about the property, register for an educational webinar on the property or request one-on-one training.
